MICROGRANT PROGRAM
Request for Applications

The Einstein Global Health Center Microgrant Program aims to provide small grants to help jumpstart faculty members' global health efforts. It is expected that the microgrants will lead to creation of new global health initiatives or further leveraging of existing initiatives. The following are examples (but not limited to) of the types of projects that the Microgrant Program would typically fund:

- * Samples acquisition/research material acquisition (e.g., purchasing research machinery to be located overseas, etc.)
- * On-site (international) expertise (e.g., personnel, program coordinator, etc.)
- * Shipping costs of research-related materials
- * International Collaborations
- * Evaluation Fees (e.g., consultants, etc.)

Applicants may submit requests for microgrants for up to $2,000. Applications should be no more than 2 pages in length, and should explain how the funds will be used to create or strengthen their global health initiatives.
