

Social Medicine Curriculum, 2023-24

Our Social Media Curriculum is co-created by our Pediatrics, Internal Medicine and Family Medicine faculty and residents. It aims to create community among trainees, staff and faculty across the three specialties; to explore learners to the complex social and structural issues that impact health and wellness for Bronx residents; and to encourage an approach to medicine that centers health equity and person-centered care.

The Curriculum is comprised of the following offerings:

Health Equity Rounds: Created and delivered by residents, these once-quarterly meetings cover biomedical, psychosocial, social determinants and structural causes of inequitable health outcomes and use group and peer-learning to offer novel approaches to clinical care.

Social Medicine Rounds: Our Social Medicine Rounds are an opportunity to connect our staff, faculty, trainees and community members to local and national leaders who discuss the medical, economic and psychosocial issues impacting the health and wellness of our Bronx community. We meet every 4th Tuesday of the month on a virtual platform that allows us to be in community, not just with our staff, trainees and faculty, but with other Bronx residents.

Tri-Track: The Tri-Track sessions offer an intensive, interactive in-person session from 3:15- 6:00 pm with a focus on experiential learning from community members, activists and patients who offer an alternative view to the question of how we provide holistic, equitable healthcare.

Undoing Racism Workshop: Led by the People's Institute for Survival and Beyond, this two-and-a-half-day workshop establishes a foundation for our antiracist work and guides trainees and faculty to address the impact of racism on all aspects of daily life, including in how we engage with each other and in clinical care delivery. At the end of the workshop, participants are able to address the implicit and stark instances of racism at play in various interpersonal and clinical interactions.

Social Medicine Immersion Month [link to website]: Our Social Medicine Immersion Month is for our intern class across the Pediatrics, Family Medicine and Internal Medicine to meet, learn about structural issues impacting the Bronx community, and engage with key community members working to address these challenges.

Social Medicine Symposium: The Social Medicine Symposium is a time to meet as a community to highlight our social medicine curriculum and social justice work.

End of Year Events, Spring 2024, Dates TBD:

Social Medicine Showcases: 3-4 small group sessions focusing on ongoing social medicine initiatives by our present residents and faculty or by department alumni.

Annual Harold Wise Memorial Lecture honoring Dr Harold Wise who developed the Residency Program in Social Medicine
Family and Social Medicine Poster Day highlighting department research.

Social Medicine Projects: These research projects provide an experiential learning activity through which residents can demonstrate knowledge and skills that are relevant to primary care practice and advocacy with a social medicine orientation/perspective. Completion of the Social Medicine project allows residents to demonstrate competence in multiple Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education domains, but especially in Practice-based Learning and Improvement and in Systems-Based Practice.
